

WHAT IS THE ROLE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS ADVOCACY IN THE FIGHT AGAINST CLIMATE CHANGE?

Katharina Rall, Researcher, Health and Human Rights Division, Human Rights Watch

Ms. Rall will provide background on her research on the relationship between human rights and climate change. She will discuss the work that HRW is undertaking on the impacts of climate change on access to food, water, health, and livelihoods of marginalized communities. In particular, Ms. Rall will present on HRW's research from Kenya, illustrating the contribution of human rights fact-finding and advocacy in the fight against climate change.

This event is the second in the Human Rights Institute's 2016-17 series "Exploring the Transformative Potential of Human Rights," commemorating the 50th anniversary of the two foundational United Nations human rights covenants.
